Introduction

Two of the most important factors to students deciding where to apply to college are programs of study and college location. The Index of Majors is designed to help students find out which colleges offer the particular fields of study that interest them and are in the location they prefer. In addition, the Index includes lists of colleges that have special admissions procedures, offer special academic programs, or have religious affiliations. Now in its ninth edition, the Index is based on all-new data collected from colleges during the 1985-86 academic year.

Colleges eligible for listing

There are approximately 3,000 colleges included in the Index of Majors, 1986-87. These are all the institutions that provided curriculum information in response to the College Board's Annual Survey of Colleges.

To be included in the Index, an institution must meet the criteria for inclusion in the Department of Education Directory: Colleges and Universities published by the National Center for Education Statistics. The criteria is set by the U.S. Department of Education Division of Eligibility and Agency Evaluation. This includes colleges accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or approved by a state department of education or a state university; colleges that have attained preaccredited status with a nationally recognized accrediting agency; and public and nonprofit colleges whose credits have been accepted as if coming from an accredited institution by at least three accredited institutions. Institutions offering graduate-level curriculums only, as well as undergraduate, are included in the Index. Six institutions in foreign countries are included here on the basis of their membership in the College Board. To find out if a particular college or graduate institution that interests you is listed in the Index, see "Colleges included in this book."

Major fields of study

There are over 500 major fields of study listed in the Index. Each major field of study is listed alphabetically and the colleges and graduate schools that offer a major in that field are listed state by state. Some institutions listed here do not offer majors in the traditional sense, but do provide in-depth specialization which approximates the coursework usually required for a degree.

The list of curriculum fields used in the Index is based on the HEGIS taxonomy of instructional programs used by the National Center for Education Statistics. Colleges were provided with the list of fields and asked to use it to report their majors, even though their own titles for some of the programs might not fit exactly the titles on the list. However, colleges could and often did add the names of other curriculums that they felt did not conform closely enough to any title on the list. These additional fields are not included in the Index of Majors, but can be found in The College Handbook.

Two types of associate majors are offered: (1) technologies and vocational specialties that are generally completed in two years of college study and are usually sufficient for entrance into an occupational field, and (2) college- or university-parallel programs, which are like the first two years of a four-year college curriculum. Students obtaining a degree in a nonvocational area often transfer to four-year colleges where they complete the requirements for a bachelor's degree in a specific major.

Bachelor's degree programs generally require four or more years of study. Graduate programs vary in length. The degree level offered in a specific major is indicated by the letter after each college's name:
Associate degree (A)
Bachelor's degree (B)
Master's degree (M)
Doctor's degree (D)
First professional degree (F)
Work beyond doctor's or first professional degree (W)

Special academic programs

There are seventeen special academic programs listed in this section: accelerated study, combined bachelor's/graduate degree, cooperative education, double major, external degree, honors program, independent study, internship, liberal arts and career combination, semester at sea, student-designed major, study abroad, teacher preparation, United Nations semester, visiting/exchange student program, Washington semester, and weekend college. The programs are described in the glossary at the beginning of the Index. For each program, there is a state-by-state listing of colleges that offer that option. Institutions that offer these programs through cross-registration are generally not listed. However, colleges that offer liberal arts and career combinations through joint programs with other institutions are included here. For specific information about academic programs offered through cross-registration, and for information about other special programs not listed in the Index, readers should consult The College Handbook.

Special admissions procedures

Colleges that say they subscribe to the Candidates Reply Date Agreement (CRDA) and the Early Decision Plan (EDP), two special admissions programs, are listed in this section. The purpose of both agreements is to protect the interests of students applying to colleges: in the first instance by allowing the applicant for admission to hear from all the colleges to which he or she has applied before making a final decision, and in the second instance by allowing students to hear from the colleges of their choice as early as possible in their senior year, thus reducing anxiety and unnecessary multiple applications. The programs are defined in the glossary at the beginning of the Index.

Colleges that have religious affiliations

This section lists 51 religious denominations and organizations and the colleges, state by state, that reported they were affiliated with each. The list of religious groups is based on the survey list used by the National Center for Education Statistics. Colleges were supplied with this list and asked to report any affiliation, whether formal or informal. Those colleges that said they were affiliated with religious groups not included on this list are reported under the heading "Other religious affiliations." The name of the specific affiliation for each of these colleges can be found in The College Handbook in the individual college description.

Colleges included in this book

This section tells you which colleges appear in the Index of Majors, 1986-87. Institutions are listed by state and by whether they characterize themselves as two-year, two-year upper-division, three-year, four-year, five-year, or graduate institutions. Generally, two-year colleges offer associate degrees only. In a few cases—usually at branch campuses of university systems—a junior or community college also awards a bachelor's degree. These colleges are indicated by a superscript[b] after the college name. Upper-division institutions and colleges offering three or more years of study usually grant bachelor's degrees. Many of these colleges also offer degrees at the graduate and associate levels. For those colleges that offer associate as well as bachelor's degrees, a superscript[a] appears after the college's name. An address to which students can write for additional information is also included for each college.

Indexes

There are two indexes to the major fields of study listed in the Index. In "Major fields of study by discipline," specific majors are grouped into general categories corresponding to the HEGIS taxonomy. Students who know the broad discipline in which they are interested but who seek information about what specific majors are offered within that discipline should look here. The second index lists all major fields of study in alphabetic sequence.

Glossary of special programs

Special academic programs

Accelerated program. A college program of study completed in less time than is usually required, most often by attending in summer or by carrying extra courses during the regular academic term. Completion of a bachelor's degree program in three years is an example of acceleration.

Combined bachelor's/graduate degree. A program to which students are accepted for study at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. The program usually can be completed in less time than two individual programs.

Cooperative education. A college program in which a student alternates between semesters (or other periods) of full-time study and full-time employment in related work. Students are paid for their work at the prevailing rate. Typically, five years are required to complete a bachelor's degree program under the cooperative plan, but graduates have the advantage of having completed about a year's practical experience in addition to their studies.

Double major. Any program of study in which a student completes the requirements of two majors concurrently.

External degree. A program of college study in which students earn credits toward a degree through independent study, college courses, proficiency examinations, and personal experience. External degree programs require minimal or no classroom attendance.

Honors program. Any special program for very able students offering the opportunity for educational enrichment, independent study, acceleration, or some combination of these.

Independent study. Any arrangement that allows students to complete some of their college program by studying independently instead of attending scheduled classes and completing group assignments. Typically, students plan programs of study in consultation with a faculty adviser or committee to whom they may report periodically and submit a final report for evaluation.

Internship. Any short-term, supervised work experience, usually related to a student's major field, for which the student earns academic credit. The work can be full or part time, on or off campus, paid or unpaid. Student teaching and apprenticeships are examples of internships.

Liberal arts and career combination. A program in which a student completes three years of study in a liberal arts field followed by two years of professional/technical study (for example, engineering, allied health, forestry) at the end of which the student is awarded bachelor of arts and bachelor of science degrees.

Semester at sea. A program for credit, usually for students with majors in oceanography or marine-related fields, in which students live for part of a semester on a ship, frequently a research vessel. Academic courses are generally taken in conjunction with the sea experience or at separate times during the semester.

Student-designed major. A program that allows a student to construct a major field of study not formally offered by the college. Often nontraditional and interdisciplinary in nature, the major is developed by the student with the approval of a designated college officer or committee.

Study abroad. Any arrangement by which a student completes part of the college program—typically the junior year but frequently only a semester or a summer—studying in another country. A college may operate a campus abroad or it may have a cooperative agreement with some other American college or an institution of the other country.

Teacher preparation. A college program designed to prepare students to meet the requirements for certification as teachers in elementary and secondary schools.

United Nations semester. A program in which students generally take courses at a college in the New York City metropolitan area while participating in an internship program at the United Nations.

Visiting/exchange student program. Any arrangement between a student and a college that permits study for a semester or more at another college without extending the amount of time required for a degree.

Washington semester. A program in which students participate in an internship program with a government agency or department in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area. Students earn field service credit for their work and frequently take courses at area colleges.

Weekend college. A program that allows students to take a complete course of study and attend classes only on weekends. These programs are generally restricted to a few areas of study at a college and require more than the traditional number of years to complete.

Special admissions procedures

Candidates Reply Date Agreement. A college subscribing to the Candidates Reply Date Agreement (CRDA) will not require any applicant offered admission as a freshman to notify it of his or her decision to attend (or to accept an offer of financial aid) before May 1. The purpose of the agreement is to give applicants time to hear from all the colleges they have applied to before they have to make a commitment to any one of them. The agreement does not apply to candidates accepted under early decision plans.

Early Decision Plan (EDP). Colleges that subscribe to this plan agree to follow a common schedule for early decision applicants. Colleges may offer either a single-choice plan (EDP-S) or a first-choice plan (EDP-F). A student applying under a first-choice plan must withdraw applications from all other colleges as soon as he or she is notified of acceptance by the first-choice college. A student applying under a single-choice plan may not apply to any colleges other than his or her first choice unless rejected by that institution. If a college follows the College Board Early Decision Plan, applications (including financial aid applications) must be received by a specified date no later than November 15, and the college agrees to notify the applicant by a specified date no later than December 15.
